The Tax Commission needs a retention of six years to establish the taxpayer's pattern of compliance with tax laws. Routine correspondence and duplicate material should be weeded out on a regular basis. Audit records are needed to determine if a pattern of noncompliance exists. Two previous audits are sufficient for these purposes. In collection cases, the information is needed for compliance and as an information source for assets and income. Uncollectible accounts need to be kept in case taxpayer's financial status changes. UCA 59-15-105 (3) states that it is the

The Tax Commission has requested that the total retention for this record series be six years. UCA 59-13-305, 1989, sets a retention for the statute of limitations for pursuing action for a fraudulent return. However, other business tax returns set a limit of six years. UCA 59-13-206, 1989, places distributors under six years limitation and penalties of UCA 59-1-401, 1989. According to UCA 59-13-211, 1989, these returns are subject to audit for three years.

These records are needed to establish the taxpayer's pattern of compliance with the tax laws. Routine correspondence and duplicate material should be weeded out on a regular basis to make room for substantive information. Audit records are needed to determine if a pattern of noncompliance exists. Two previous audits are sufficient for these purposes. However, if a business closes, the record only has to be kept for the audit period which is three years. In collection cases, the information is needed for compliance and as an information source for assets and income. Uncollectible accounts are needed if financial status changes.
